

THE CROSS DIAMOND EMBRYO PROGRAM:

We expect our cows to work hard here at Cross Diamond-- and they must work even harder to enter the embryo transfer program. We only flush cows after they have established a proven record of sustained fertility, structural soundness and easy fleshing ability. Cows don't enter the embryo program until they are eight years of age or older. We feel that by that time we know what they have to offer and have proven themselves beyond a doubt. We see embryo transfer as a gateway to propagate the most elite genetics in our herd-- and we want to make sure that's what we're getting.

The foundation of our herd is old Chiefline breeding and Rambo 502. The efficiency, fertility, fleshing ability and structural soundness of our Rambo daughters is superior. We want to keep this as the backbone of the herd and keep looking for complimentary genetics to bring into the line. The sires we have used in the embryo program are a mix of old and new-- some bulls we have raised and some we have purchased. We are committed to the sustained viability of the cattle industry and the Red Angus breed and we hope this commitment is reflected through our breeding decisions.
